

Finding a Role That's Good for You and Good for the World

Deciding on a career is tricky, especially when it seems like there are multiple compelling options. During this free online workshop, participants will be introduced to a tool that will help them navigate these decisions – Probably Good's SELF Framework. Using this framework, participants will reflect on decisions they're facing, and have the opportunity to discuss their decisions and receive feedback from others. By the end of the workshop, participants should feel better equipped to compare their options and identify concrete next steps toward finding a career that's both fulfilling and highly impactful.

Workshop structure

This online workshop will run for around 90 minutes and will include:

- An introduction to the workshop that invites attendees to consider the careers they're most interested in pursuing.
- A walk-through of the SELF Framework's four major components that uses examples and highlights useful resources. After each component, attendees will have the chance to discuss their decisions with their peers and receive feedback.
- A short conclusion to point attendees to other services they may find valuable and solicit feedback.

Who this is for

This workshop is most beneficial to people who are interested in increasing their impact through their career and are open to using an analytical mindset to find the best way to achieve this.

The workshop is relevant for people at all career stages, and we can adapt its focus for specific audiences, like undergraduate students or early-/mid-career professionals. It will be particularly valuable for those who are considering a career change in the foreseeable future or are in the middle of a tricky career decision.

About us

We're Probably Good, a nonprofit organization dedicated to helping people build careers that are good for them and good for the world. We share expert-backed research and resources for free, in order to empower people to make a real difference as they navigate tough career decisions.

Get in touch

Want to book a workshop or ask any questions? We'd love to hear from you! You can use our contact form, or write to us at workshops@probablygood.org